FRANCFORT, October 2.

WE hear from Nancy, that the old man, who pretended to have had a being since the reign of the emperor Auguſtus, and to have been perſonally acquainted with the literati of that age, having ſcrap'd together money enough from fools, who gratified their curioſity to have a ſight of him at the rate of four Louis d'Or, has ſuddenly abſconded, for fear the magiſtrates ſhould at laſt take it into their heads to make him prove his age. They add, that on the walls of his lodging theſe words were found written, Mundus vult deciſi.——Let him play his next pranks in England, no place in the world affording ſo good encouragement to knaves and jugglers of every claſs.

London, October 1. We are deſired to acquaint the public, that this day arriv'd from W—ſl—r, at the cuſtom houſe key, a curious parcel of WOOLEN SHOES to be delivered at the long room adjoining, at the reaſonable price of an OATH, to what is not in the power of any man to be certain of; to the honour of our country, and the Religion ſo often ſpoke of therein. And we are well inform'd, that a celebrated artiſt is employ'd by ſome political gentlemen, to prepare another parcel, entirely in the French taſte, from the model invented in 1732, which are intended to be diſpoſed of at the warehouſe in the old jewry, and by all the wholeſale traders in this once free nation, or empire, at the ſmall expence of our liberty. O happy BRITAIN!

October 5. By this day's Holland mail we have advice that a courier from London had paſſed through the Hague, going to Dreſden, with his Britannic majeſty's ratification of the treaty of ſubſidy lately concluded with the king of Poland, elector of Saxony; and that the ſaid courier was alſo charged with diſpatches for the courts of Peterſburg, Vienna, and Munich, in order to inform thoſe courts of the ratification of the treaty in queſtion, and thereby give weight to the meaſures depending on the concluſion of this alliance.

To day's advices from Conſtantinople, dated September 4, N. S. mention the plague's raging there to ſuch a degree, as to render the miſery and calamity of the inhabitants inexpreſſible, through the want of almoſt every neceſſary of life, &c. It's computed that upwards of 300,000 perſons have been carried off by that diſtemper.

As the ſeaſon for Political Entertainments is approaching, we are inform'd, that ſeveral of the principal Performers, are extremely diligent in getting up their reſpective Parts. On the one hand, the Plauſibles propoſe recommending paſt wiſdom, applauding preſent happineſs, and propheſying future advantages to prove their juſt titles to all the good Things they have, and to better, whenever they are to be had. On the other hand, the Spitfires are laying in a large ſtock of declamatory eloquence which they will play off with the utmoſt vehemency, until the Grand Cup Bearer is obliged to reach out the Spicy Bowl, and ſuffer them to take ſuch a Draught as may, for the preſent at leaſt, aſſuage their Thirſt.

Oct. 8. We are informed, that a few days ago, a perſon of diſtinction ſent his ſervant with two letters, one to go to a perſon of quality in town, and the other by the poſt, which, by miſtake, were delivered wrong; and on opening one of them, a liſt of ſixteen perſons of rank appeared, who had formed a ſcheme of altering ſome certain affairs, which, by this unlucky accident, will, in all probability, miſcarry.

Tueſday was held a board of lords of trade and plantations; at which were preſent all the lords of the board; when ſeveral methods were agreed on for the ſupport of the colony of Nova Scotia.

Oct. 12. It is currently reported, that all the pecuniary ſchemes for the year enſuing, are actually ſettled, Expedients found for accommodating certain Differences abroad, and other precautions taken for facilitating the Diſpatch of Buſineſs at home; ſo that unleſs ſome untoward and unexpected Accidents intervene, the dealers in political Diſputes will make but an indifferent Figure this winter.

From Madrid we hear, that the king of Spain has engaged in his ſervice for a conſiderable penſion, a native of England very expert in the conſtruction of ſhips, and given him orders to build twelve men of war of different rates, with all poſſible diligence. They add, that the Engliſhman had already finiſh'd a fifty gun ſhip, and a packet boat of 8 guns, both which were launch'd at Ferrol in the beginning of laſt month.

In all well inſtituted commonwealths, care has been taken to limit men's poſſeſſions; which is done for many reaſons, and, amongſt the reſt, for one which perhaps is not often conſidered, i. e. that when Bounds are ſet to men's Deſires, after they have acquired as much as the laws will permit them, their private Intereſt is at an end, and they have nothing to do but to take care of the Public.—Hence one need not wonder if the public is not better taken care of in moſt modern ſtates, when we ſee men that can reckon up their Thouſands and Ten Thouſands of annual rents, ſtill eagerly ſcrambling for more, engaging in any dirty jobb to increaſe the ſtore, adding houſe to houſe, and joining field to field, ſometimes meanly ſtooping to accept a penſion for ſervices they are aſhamed to own, and leaving the care of the public to poſterity, who at the rate things are managed, may probably not be left in a condition to help themſelves.—But where is the remedy for this evil? No where to be found; The diſeaſe is obvious to all, but the cure out of the reach of human ſkill: In every country power follows riches; therefore it cannot be expected the mighty will ever make a law by which themſelves muſt be moſt affected. So that all the wiſe can do, is to take the world as they find it, make the beſt of every bad market, reform what they can, and leave providence to deal with what is too hard for them.
